Ceiling light LED PCB

OAMI PAT.N°:
002484196-0001

Installation instructions

1. Open up your ceiling light and remove all the inner parts.

2. Connect the ceiling light LED PCB module, using the L and N wire.

3. The magnets at the bottom of the module will allow to easily fix the LED PCB module into the middle of the lamp panel.

4. Install the outer cover and switch on the device.

CD-MODE
This mode is used to control the RGB-value of the LEDs. The M-button will change the mode (for example: from three-color jumpy to three-color gradual changing). The color disk will make the LEDs change to the specific color you want.

CT-MODE
The CT-mode is used to change the color temperature of the LEDs from Warm White (WW) to Cool White (CW) by adjusting the color disk. The Mode-button will change between default values.

DIM-MODE
This mode is used to control the brightness of LEDs which consists of a single color by adjusting the color wheel. The M-button switches between default values (for example: 25%, 50%, 75% or 100% brightness).

LED-strips

There are certain aspects about installing LED-strips that really need to be taken care off:

- + and - MUST be respected!
- You need to install the LED-strips in such a way that the current goes into the strip at both sides. Otherwise the intensity of the LEDs will fade out and there will be a higher risk of overheating.

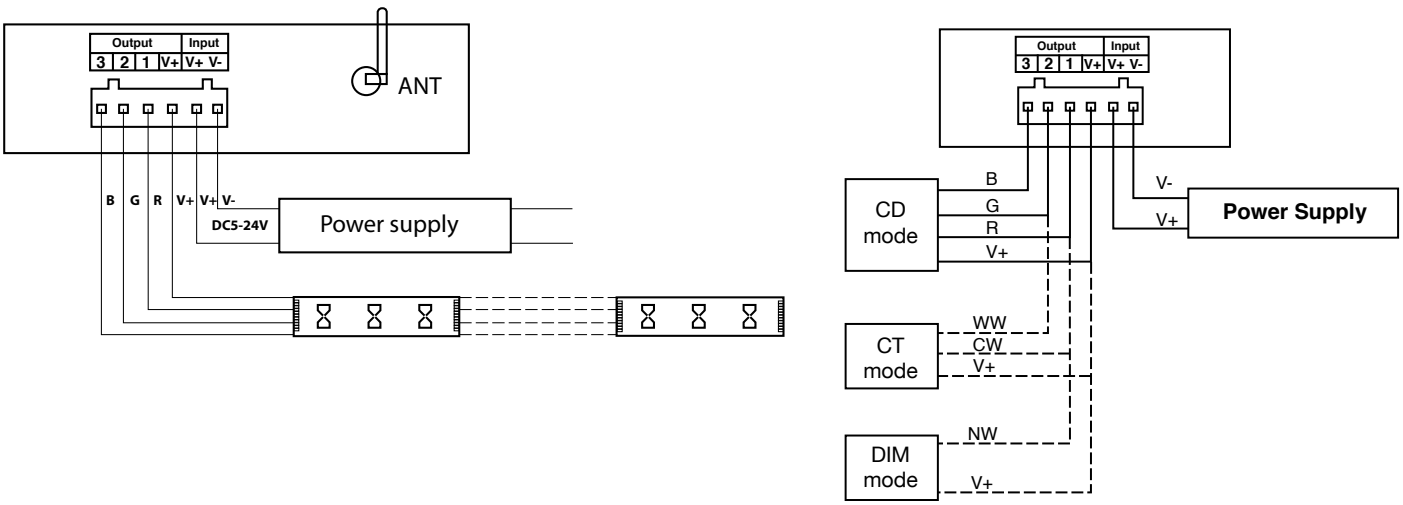

- For installing more than one RGB-strip in the same cycle, an amplifier is needed to increase the system load capacity.

Please consult the table on the next page to meet the regulations regarding cable thickness and cable length!

- The Wifi-LED-Controller can be used for as well the white as the RGB-LED-strips. The illustrations below show you how to install the setup properly.

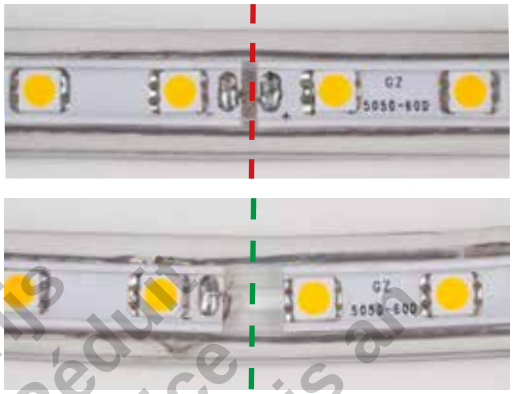

LED-strips

- If a LED-strip needs to be cut, please do so between the connectors you see regularly on the strip. Afterwards it needs to be soldered to ensure a good connection. If an outdoor strip needs to be cut, you will both need to solder and glue it to make sure it is properly sealed off from weather conditions. The white 220V LED-strip will also need an end cap.

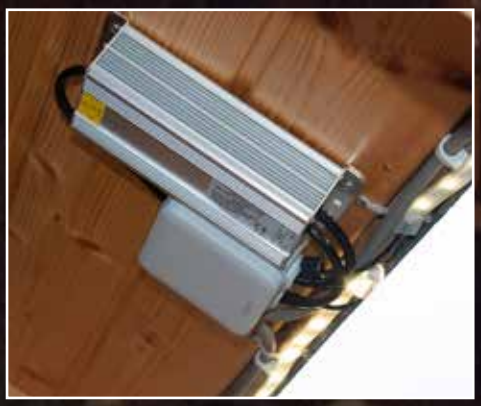

- When your wires are too thin, there will be a loss of voltage. This could also be very dangerous because of heat development. To make sure you use the correct thickness of cables, consult the table below. The installation should always be done by a professional!

  Between the power supply and the LED-strips, your cable must meet a number of conditions. We recommend to install the power supply as close to the LED-strips as possible. If this is not possible, the table below suggests values for the maximum cable length.

IP XX

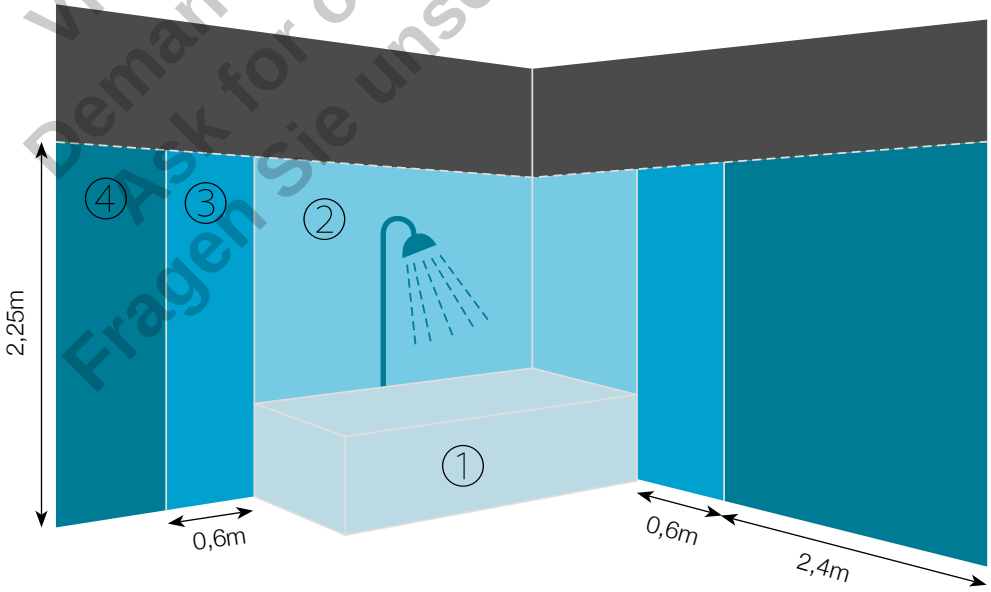

First number = protection against solid objects

IP 0x = no special protection
IP 1x = protected against solid objects over 50mm (for example: accidental touch by a persons hands)
IP 2x = protected against solid objects over 12mm (a persons fingers)
IP 3x = protected against solid objects over 2,5mm (tools and wires)
IP 4x = protected against solid objects over 1mm (tools, wires and small wires)
IP 5x = protected against dust limited ingress
IP 6x = totally protected against dust

Second number = protection against liquids

IP x0 = no protection
IP x1 = protetion against vertically falling drops of water (condensation)
IP x2 = protetion against direct sprays of water up to 15° from the vertical
IP x3 = protetion against direct sprays of water up to 60° from the vertical
IP x4 = protetion against water sprayed from all directions - limited ingress permitted
IP x5 = protetion against low pressure jets of water from all directions - limited ingress
IP x6 = protetion against temporary flooding of water - limited ingress permitted (for example: use on ship decks)
IP x7 = protetion against the effect of immersion between 15cm and 1m
IP x8 = protetion against long periods of immersion under pressure
